Excerpt: . . . the patient to a specialist only when needed, and oversee and coordinate the patients care. Walk-in triage. According to officials at the medical center, delivering nonurgent care on a walk-in basis ( without a scheduled appointment ) - a practice common at many VA medical centers - limits the number of appointments that can be scheduled because providers spend time on unscheduled walk-in patients instead of scheduled patients. They also said that treating walk-in patients is not in the best interest of the patients or providers because the treatment is episodic and lacks continuity of care; consequently, providers do not get to know the patients and are less involved in their overall health. The medical center now triages walk-in patients, with a nurse assessing them to determine whether they need emergency, urgent, or nonurgent care. If their conditions require care in the emergency room or urgent care clinic, they are seen immediately. However, if their conditions...
