Another resident of the English town, John Coulton, sent a poem written by himself and dedicated to our Lynn, which was read at the anniversary, the last stanza of which was: -- For each a happy future is in store, If wisdom s counsels shall unite the nations Firmer in friendship for our feuds of yore--Alone, unrivall d in our lofty stations Old England new in brighter destinies, New England old in hallow d memories. Still another letter was received from Robert Brooks in which he said in part: -- Many of us when youths at school, scanning the map of the Young Giant your country, have had our eyes drawn to Norfolk and to Lynn in a far distant land, --the names of our county and loved old town--we have wondered how it was, and at times with anxiety have wished to learn something of your history. At last kindly words have come across the sea. You tell a tale of affection for one you were pleased to honour, -- A beloved clergyman who once claimed our home as his; in honouring him you honoured us. We now, in no formal words, Thank you. Another occasion of interest was the celebration by the Lynn Historical Society, called King s Lynn Night, which was observed a few years ago with appropriate exercises, including lectures on historical subjects pertaining to the old Lynn, stereopticon views of the places of interest and a description of...
