BiblioGov. Paperback. Book Condition: New. This item is printed on demand. Paperback. 26 pages. Dimensions: 9.7in. x 7.4in. x 0.1in. GAO assessed the decisions of Lowry Air Force Base (AFB), Columbus AFB, and the Navy to contract for aircraft maintenance services, focusing on: (1) projected cost savings; (2) the potential impact on personnel and equipment readiness; (3) the economic impact on the affected communities; (4) the impact on wartime mobilization requirements and personnel rotation schedules; and (5) other impacts on base functions. GAO found that: (1) Lowry AFB would realize its projected savings of 3. 4 million; (2) the Navy, which consolidated several air stations aircraft maintenance requirements under two contracts, would realize most of its projected savings of 52. 6 million; (3) Columbus AFB probably would not realize its projected savings of 4. 2 million due to unsatisfactory contractor performance, and could incur additional costs in excess of those initially estimated for in-house maintenance; (4) most civilians obtained other government employment, and military personnel transferred, retired, or left the service; (5) both the Navy and the Air Force reported a minimal economic impact on the affected communities; (6) both the Navy and the Air Force reported no impacts on mobilization requirements or rotation schedules; and (7) loss of some of the personnel had a slight, but insignificant, impact on other base functions, such as commissary services and recreation facilities. This item ships from La Vergne, TN. Paperback.
